National Health Insurance “Integrated Healthcare Program” Officially Launched

KMUH Partners with 8 Institutions to Safeguard Indigenous Health

For nearly 30 years, Kaohsiung Medical University Chung-Ho Memorial Hospital (KMUH) has been dedicated to improving healthcare in the remote mountainous and island regions of Kaohsiung City’s Taoyuan, Namasia, and Maolin Districts through the Integrated Delivery System (IDS) program. Starting in 2025, the National Health Insurance Administration has upgraded the IDS program into the “Kaohsiung City Integrated Healthcare Program.” KMUH is collaborating with eight institutions, including three indigenous district health centers, medical centers (KMUH and Kaohsiung Veterans General Hospital), a regional hospital (Cishan Hospital), and clinics (Da Jia Clinic and Nibun Dental Clinic), to deliver higher-quality healthcare and protect the health of indigenous communities.

On March 9, a launch ceremony was held at the Maolin Multifunctional Activity Center, bringing together representatives from the National Health Insurance Administration’s Kaohsiung-Pingtung Branch, Kaohsiung City Health Bureau, KMUH, and partner institutions. The event also featured a health screening carnival, providing vital health checks for local residents and fostering a healthier, happier community.

This Integrated Healthcare Program, driven by the collaboration of eight institutions, aims to set a new standard for indigenous healthcare in Kaohsiung.
